Death of Mrs. Klemme

DRIVER OF AUTO MISTOOK CULVERT FOR BRIDGE—TOP. FLED OVER

The Chronicle of Aug. 10 says: The eighth auto fatality in eight days, the killing of Mrs. Annie Klemme by a machine dropping off the end of a culvert and turning turtle fourteen miles down the county road, near Uncle Tom's Cabin, about 10:30 o'clock on Sunday night, seems to have been the result of mistaking an unusually long diagonal sweep of planked culvert for an expected crossroad, and turning slowly to the left and following the supposed road to a sudden drop of seven feet into a dry, sandy creek bed, sparsely covered with a light growth of willows about the height of a man's head.

The car, a five-seated Pullman, bought a year ago by its owner and driver, was descending a slight grade at a speed of less than six miles an hour, and upon reaching the level of the very long culvert turned to the left, still more slowly, and then at the brink of the culvert, and almost stopped with applied brakes, topped straight down, rested on the front end of the radiator, clung at the rear for an instant to the edge of the culvert, and then flopped on over, with wheels in the air.

Caught Under Tonneau.

The two occupants of the back seat, a boy and an old man, were flung gently out into the willows, which acted as a sort of cushion and kept the back of the tonneau from reaching the ground. The driver flopped out unimpeded into a depression in the sandy bottom, and the lone woman, who was on the front seat, possibly had tried to fling herself free, because outside of the seat rim rested heavily and squarely across her chest. The running board was sufficiently high from the ground for the men to place their shoulders under and lift it, so as to enable the others to extricate the unconscious woman.

She was borne across the intervening vacant field, about 100 yards only, to Uncle Tom's Cabin, where there happened to be a trained nurse. Two physicians arrived promptly, but too late to render any aid, as the victim was fatally crushed and did not survive more than a quarter of an hour.

A boy living in the neighborhood said he saw the machine go slowly off the end and stand for an instant almost on its head before flopping over. While the machine was in the creek, this boy spied a roadster coming down the incline and actually turning to make the same error when he warned it. Then some one came and placed two lanterns at the ends of the deceptive culvert.

Nearly in front of Uncle Tom's Cabin, on the main-traveled road, a new bridge is being built. Both approaches to this obstacle are provided with temporary barriers to warn traffic aside. So conveyances and autos turn aside a block to take the two-block parallel course to the northward, crossing the same little dry creek. Wolfe's error was in mistaking the culvert for the crossroad by which he was to return to the main avenue on his way back to San Francisco.

Clarence N. Wolfe, driver of the auto, lives in a flat at 2103 Howard street, over a corner grocery, and is connected with the Wolfe Lumber and Hardware Company at 2299 Folsom street. He is medium sized, dark and single and about 28 years of age. Living in the same flat with him were Mrs. Annie Klemme, 37 years of age, whose husband resides in Honolulu, and Mrs. Klemme's fifteen-year-old son, Harry, a student at the Mission Grammar School. Saturday evening these three, with Mr. Hughes, about 60 years of age, who resides at Onodaga avenue and Mission street, went to a private place on a ten-acre orchard near Redwood City, and there spent the night.

Wolfe said he did not know Hughes' first name or anything about him, and he also declined yesterday to give any information as to the business of Klemme in Honolulu.

Wolfe was unharmed. Hughes received a scratch over the left eye, and young Klemme was also slightly scratched on the forehead.

Mrs. Klemme has a mother and two sisters residing in Oakland.

BURIAL OF SIEMSEN

Without a single mourner or any funeral service, the body of John Siemsen, the gas-pipe thug, who was hanged at San Quentin, was buried in the Catholic cemetery at San Rafael. Since the execution Siemsen's body has lain in the undertaking establishment of Stephen Eden at San Rafael awaiting shipment to the dead man's relatives in the Hawaiian Islands. The undertaker alone knows when it will be sent or who has authorized its shipment.

The funeral yesterday was a surprise to many curious people who have been visiting the undertaker's daily to see the face of the notorious criminal, as Eden said that the remains would be sent to the Hawaiian Islands before the end of this week.
